INTERPRETING KEY TRIALS

Hormone replacement and breast cancer: Implications of the Iowa Women's Health Study 608

A recent study does not resolve the controversy about whether hormone replacement therapy causes breast cancer, but it gives us another reason for cautious optimism that this therapy is safe.

UPDATE ON ACUTE CORONARY SYNDROMES

Aspirin, ticlopidine, and clopidogrel in acute coronary syndromes: Underused treatments could save thousands of lives 615

Aspirin is the cornerstone of therapy for unstable angina and acute myocardial infarction. Yet, in spite of clear data, it is often not given or given late. An accompanying illustration shows how antiplatelet drugs block the cascade of platelet aggregation.

CANCER DIAGNOSIS AND MANAGEMENT

Early recognition of spinal cord compression in cancer patients 629

The only way to preserve ambulatory function in patients with spinal cord compression due to spinal metastases is to recognize and treat it early, while the patient can still walk.
