FROM THE EDITOR.....

The art and evidence of medical practice 544

A message from the Spine Patient Outcomes Research Trial (SPORT) could be that the artful judgment of a seasoned clinician, with patient input, may actually be a valid way to make decisions.

MEDICAL GRAND ROUNDS.....

Colorectal cancer screening lacks evidence of benefit 545

Although some studies indicate that screening with fecal occult blood testing or colonoscopy prevents deaths from colorectal cancer, the benefits may be offset by more deaths from other causes.

MEDICAL GRAND ROUNDS.....

Chronic hepatitis B virus infection: Issues in treatment 557

Should we treat all patients with hepatitis B virus infection to prevent liver cancer? Which is the best treatment strategy? What should we do if patients develop resistance to our current drugs? Should we treat patients who already have developed cirrhosis?

INTERPRETING KEY TRIALS

Interpreting the Spine Patient Outcomes Research Trial. 577

Medical vs surgical treatment of lumbar disk herniation: Implications for future trials

The Spine Patient Outcomes Research Trial compared surgical and nonsurgical treatment in patients with radicular pain. The treatments were equivalent on intention-to-treat analysis, but up to 40% of patients in each group "crossed over" to the other treatment, muddying the results.

REVIEW

New insights into ischemic heart disease in women 585

Ischemic heart disease appears to be substantially different in women and men, and it is time to devise sex-specific strategies for detecting and assessing it.

CURRENT DRUG THERAPY

Atypical antipsychotics: New drugs, new challenges 597

Second-generation antipsychotic, or atypical, drugs are much less likely than typical antipsychotics to cause movement disorders, but they come with a new variety of side effects, particularly metabolic ones.
